

Point of View: Who is Telling the Story?

In literature the point of view is the story from one person's perspective. A trick is to ask, "Who is talking?" In other words, who is the narrator? The narrator is the person who is telling the story. There are two main types of narrators: first person and third person.

If the author is using first person narration, the narrator is a main character and uses I or me when speaking.

In third person narration the narrator uses he, she, it or they. The words I and me are used only in dialogue.

Below are passages from books. Read them and write what type of narration is being used: first person or third person. Then briefly explain your reasons.

1) There were six young colts in the meadow besides me. They were older than I was; some were nearly as large as grown-up horses. I used to run with them, and had great fun; we used to gallop all together round and round the field...
